It Scares People

Who come of a consumptive family, when they begin to cough and the lungs are painful. But it is a fact beyond dispute that consumption is not and cannot be inherited. The microbe which breeds disease must absolutely be received by the individual before consumption can be developed. Men and women who have been afflicted with consumption, coughs, bronchitis, bleeding of the lungs, emaciation and weakness, have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures the cough, heals the lungs, and builds up the body with solid flesh.

$3,000 FORFEIT

Will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"When I commenced taking your medicine, eighteen months ago, my health was completely broken down," writes Mrs. C. A. L. Sunderland, of Chesapeake, Calvert Co., Md. "At times I could not even walk across the room without pausing in my chest. The doctor who attended me said I had lung trouble, and that I would never be well again. Altogether I have taken eighteen bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and feel like a new man. I am now almost entirely well, and do all my work without any pause whatever, and can walk with more ease than could formerly walk."

TRUTH OF THE RALEIGH CASE,

WHICH HAS BEEN DISTORTED BY REPUBLICAN PAPERS.

Alkman Girl Was Killed by Accident, Not While Defending Her Honor.

TESTIMONY OF RELIABLE PEOPLE.

The Republican papers and managers of Kentucky have seen fit to make Gov. Beckham's pardon record the main issue in the present gubernatorial campaign. A great fuss has been made about the pardon granted to one Joseph Raleigh nearly two years ago by Governor Beckham. No stir was made about it at the time of the issue of the pardon, because it was of no more consequence than any one of the number of righteous pardons which every Governor, in the discharge of his official duty, feels impelled to grant. The matter is brought up at this late day simply to create prejudice in the minds of the voters.

The Louisville Post and Herald have been foremost in their tirades against Gov. Beckham for issuing pardons and especially the Raleigh pardon. They have asserted and contended that the girl, Samantha Akeman, was shot by Joseph Raleigh while defending her honor against his advances. In a recent issue the Louisville Post said:

"Pardons for men who kill girls of fourteen, who were defending their honor, is not a campaign issue. It goes to the very heart of all organized society. Ponder the record in the Raleigh case, men and women of Kentucky, and thank the Louisville Herald which first developed the facts in the case."

These papers seem never to have tried to discover the truth of the case, but have gone on publishing their campaign bosh regardless of the facts. THE HERALD scribe heard of the case and straightway determined to find out the truth from parties who knew the facts and details. Below will be found a full explanation of the Raleigh case, which thoroughly exposes the groundless warfare being made against Gov. Beckham on account of the pardons he has granted:

FRANKFORT, KY., August 3, 1903.

Heber Matthews, Hartford, Ky.

Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of yours of the 1st inst., asking for a statement in regard to the pardon of Joseph Raleigh by Governor Beckham.

Raleigh was convicted at the June term, 1893, of the Breathitt Circuit Court, of the murder of Samantha Akeman or Akeman, the name being spelled both ways in the papers. He was pardoned by Governor Beckham on November 26, 1901. There is not a particle of evidence in the papers to show that the girl was killed while defending her honor, except in a protest signed by nine people, which claims that he had previously accosted her. The principal petition, signed by nearly two hundred people, makes the following statement:

"We are satisfied that he is not guilty of the charge for which he was convicted. The killing was done by an accidental shot. A crowd of men were drinking on the day of the killing, near the mouth of Long's Creek and were shooting promiscuously, and a shot from some of their pistols killed the deceased. There was no motive for Raleigh to do the killing. He was a good friend to the deceased and to her father and family at the time. We do not believe he did the shooting, though it was claimed on him by designing persons who wanted to escape the responsibility themselves."

Another petition signed by a hundred or more, including nearly all the Breathitt county officials, makes the following statement:

"The facts as we remember them are about as follows: On the day of the killing some six or eight men, together with Raleigh, met in a public road near the mouth of Long's Creek, nearly all of whom were more or less intoxicated. Some three or four of them engaged in a game of cards near the roadside. Raleigh and two or three others went up the road some seventy-five or one hundred yards, at which point they met the deceased girl. After she passed Raleigh and others in the road, they stopped, and she approached the other crowd and was nearly opposite them. Some shots were fired by the men in the lower road and immediately Raleigh began firing his pistol in the direction of the place of the first firing, and during the shooting, the girl was killed."

The late J. B. Marcan, in a letter on the subject, says "I feel perfectly satisfied from what investigation I have made that he is not guilty of murder. I do not believe he did the killing at all. It is very plain to me that if he did, he did it accidentally and without any intention on his part to do so. If this is true, he ought to be pardoned."

Joseph Akeman, the father of the girl killed, writes as follows: "If Joseph Raleigh killed my daughter, it was unintentional on his part. They were friends and in their younger days were playmates together, and under all the circumstances, I believe he ought to be pardoned."

The Circuit Judge who presided in the trial, the Commonwealth's Attorney and County Attorney who prosecuted, all join in the petition for Raleigh's pardon, and in all the papers and letters there is not a hint of any improper relations or proposition upon the part of Raleigh, except in the one statement in protest signed, as I have before stated, by nine people.

The Louisville Herald, which published the charge, has been convicted of willful suppression of the records. I have in my possession an affidavit from Mr. A. J. Jones, a young stenographer, who was employed by the Herald to copy the record in the Raleigh case, to the effect that he did copy and furnish to the Herald a copy of the letter from John A. Akeman, the father of the girl, in which he asked for the pardon of Raleigh. The Herald failed to publish the Akeman letter, and in an editorial a few days later, stated that such a letter was not on file at the time the record was copied for the Herald. It failed to publish the affidavit of Jones, though it was furnished with the affidavit by Jones himself.

Now, these are the facts as briefly as I can relate them. You can form your own conclusions as to the credibility of a paper that, professing to want to see the public records, will distort and suppress them in such a manner.

Very truly yours,

EDW. O. LEIGH, Secretary to the Governor.

Costly Price for a Bath.

[Milwaukee Sentinel.]

"When I was connected with the hotel at Lake Minnetonka several years ago," remarked C. W. Delvey, manager of the St. Charles Hotel, "we had as a regular summer guest a woman from the South who was remarkably stout, weighing something over 300 pounds. One day she called a bell boy and inquired:

"What do they charge for a bath?"

"I don't know," replied the boy, "but I will find out."

"After being gone a short time the boy returned and said:

"Seven cents a pound."

"What?"

"Seven cents a pound," replied the boy, a second time, while the woman's face flushed scarlet as she made her way to the clerk's desk.

"I want my bill!" she exclaimed. "I have been grossly insulted, and shall leave your house."

"She stated her grievance, the boy was sent for, and explained:

"She asked me what they charged for a bath. I told her I didn't know, but would find out. I asked the steward, and he said seven cents a pound."

"The clerk smiled and so did the woman, as the ludicrous blunder of the boy dawned upon them, and both the clerk and the woman made the hotel office resound with their laughter."

Downie Police Carry Bibles.

[Chicago Telegram to New York World.]

Dr. Downie has inaugurated a new system of armament for the police force of Zion City. Instead of the usual baton and revolver, each Zion guard will carry a pocket Bible.

The innovation was made at a recent thanksgiving service. Col. Stern, who holds the office corresponding to Chief of Police, was called to the platform by Overseer Spelcer.

"Draw your sword," the Overseer commanded.

Col. Stern put his hand to his side in military fashion and from the scabbard at his belt pulled a pocket Bible. This was the signal for great applause from the audience.

Overseer Spelcer announced that henceforth every member of the Zion police force should carry a Bible in a scabbard at his belt.

Woke the Wrong Man.

A barber, a bald-headed man and an Irishman were traveling together, says the Jacksonville Journal. Not liking the looks of the place where they were to rest over night, they decided that one should keep watch while the other slept. The barber was to take the first watch, the Irishman the second, and the bald-headed man the last. The barber amused himself by shaving the head of the sleeping Irishman, and promptly at the stroke of 12 said: "Pat, wake up!" Pat, half awake, yawned, and passing his hand over his head, said: "Holy Moses! he's gone on!" waked up the bald-headed man, when he should have waked me up."

SHOT HUSBAND IN HIS TRACKS.

AFTER HE HAD EMPLOYED HIS REVOLVER AT HER.

The Woman With Nerves of Steel Was a Sure Dead Shot.

JEALOUS HUSBAND'S AWFUL FATE.

WILLIAMSON, W. VA., August 6.—One of the most sensational tragedies enacted in this mountainous section of West Virginia in years, occurred here at dusk this evening. Wm. Adair, one of the wealthy farmers living on Pigeon Creek, was returning home after having been in Cincinnati for a week or more, looking after some timber sales, and on nearing his residence he saw his wife coming down the public highway from the opposite direction, walking in company with a man unknown to him, but who later proved to be a traveling salesman from Ironton, Ohio.

Adair, who for months has been jealous of his wife, it is said, pulled his revolver and opened fire on her. He shot wild, every bullet missing the intended mark.

NERVES OF STEEL.

Mrs. Adair, who has nerves of steel, stood without a quiver while her husband was firing at her, and as quick as his supply of ammunition was exhausted she walked calmly into her home, took down her family Winchester from over the door, and walking into the yard, remarked to her husband, "Now it's my turn."

Adair, realizing his perilous position, and that his wife meant just what she said, started to run toward a small woodland near by, but before he had progressed 20 feet, his wife had sent a bullet from the Winchester entirely through his body, the missile having entered midway between the shoulders, coming out just over his heart. He fell dead in his tracks and never uttered a word.

Mrs. Adair added one of her finest steeds and rode quickly to this place, where she surrendered, and she is now in jail. She will be given a preliminary hearing later in the week, which means that she will simply waive examination and rest her case with the grand jury.

AN EXPERT SHOT.

Mrs. Adair is 38 years of age, and has always been a lover of target practice. She is an expert shot, and it has frequently been stated that at a target at 300 yards' distance, she could make a better record than the famous "Cap" Hatfield, whose marksmanship is renowned the world over.

Mrs. Adair talked freely of her troubles to-day, and said that her married life for more than a year had been anything but pleasant. "He was so jealous of me that I dare not visit a neighbor, for it always meant a racket on my return. Yesterday evening I had been to see a brother who was dying of consumption, and when he fired at me, I simply made up my mind instantly that I would kill him. My life in prison, if I am convicted, will be equally as pleasant as it would be at home."

Adair was wealthy, having valuable timber and coal lands in this county.

KILLED HER HUSBAND.

NASHVILLE, TENN., August 6.—Chas. T. Reed, a farmer, 30 years old, was shot and instantly killed this evening by his wife, Mrs. Susan Reed. Will Reed, a young brother of the man, wrenched the weapon from the woman's hand and shot her through the body. The tragedy occurred at the home of Seth Adams, a brother-in-law of the dead man, in the suburbs of Nashville.

It is said that the domestic life of Mr. and Mrs. Reed has been turbulent for many years. The husband left home Monday. His home was about 10 miles from the city. Mrs. Reed is at the City Hospital and may not recover.

ALSO KILLS HER HUSBAND.

ARKANSAS CITY, KAN., August 6.—Newt Farris, aged 50, while drunk to-day attacked his wife with a chair. She shot him through the heart. Mrs. Farris, who is 45 years old, has not been arrested.

End of Bitter Fight.

"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with an abscess on my right lung," writes J. F. Hughes, of Du Pont, Ga., "and gave me up. Everybody thought my time had come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The benefit I received was striking, and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I've entirely regained my health." It cures all Coughs, Colds and Throat and Lung troubles. Guaranteed by J. H. Williams. Price, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

New Idea Woman's Magazine.

The women who desire for advice how to turn their time and talents to account—will receive many valuable hints from the series of articles entitled "Profitable Industries for women," which is begun in the September number of the New Idea Woman's Magazine, under the heading "Poultry-raising," from the pen of Sarah E. Slater. The new department of "Correct Dress for Men," also began in the September issue and contributed by Hawthorne, a well-known authority in haberdashery, bids fair to be of paramount importance in this periodical, because many women do much of the shopping for the men of their families and are glad to have suggestions. Every item in the September number, either technical or fictional, is of more than passing interest.

In Time for the Resurrection.

The late Rev. Dr. Boardman, of Philadelphia, used to relate the following on himself:

"I preached a funeral sermon at one time, and spoke on the resurrection. I saw where I spoke longer than was my custom. The undertaker was a man of nervous temperament, and as the afternoon was going, he began to be anxious to be on the way to the cemetery. He finally whispered to one of the members:

"Does your minister always preach as long as that at a funeral?"

"Well," said the brother, "that is a good sermon."

"Yes," said the undertaker, "the sermon is all right, and I believe in the resurrection, but I am afraid if he does not stop pretty soon, I will not get this man buried in time."

Marital Confidences.

[Chicago Tribune.]

"Harold, what first made you think of marrying me?"

"Well, it will do no harm to tell you now. I saw you sharpen a lead pencil once. You did it neatly and without soiling your fingers, and I said to myself that a girl who could do that, would make a good wife. Tell me now when you first thought of me as a possible husband?"

"Well, it can't do any harm to tell you now. I saw you were watching me when I sharpened that pencil. I said to myself, 'maybe that's the test of a girl.' So I took unusual pains with the job."

Quick Relief for Asthma Sufferers.

Rural Criticism.

[Chicago News.]

"How savagely that cow looks at me," said the typewriter boarder from the city.

"I reckon as how it be on account of that red waist yew've got on, miss," answered the old farmer.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the key-toting maid. "Of course it isn't quite up-to-date, but I had no idea a country cow would notice it."

An Insect Tragedy.

[Washington Star.]

"What has become of our old friend?" said one mosquito.

"He was a terrible fella," answered the other. "These human beings poured kerosene all over the place."

"But he liked kerosene."

"That was the trouble. He gorged himself with it and then collided with a lightning bug."

Consumption Threatened.

C. Unger, 211 Maple street, Campaign, Ill., writes: "I was troubled with a hacking cough for a year and I thought I had consumption. I tried a great many remedies and was under the care of physicians for several months. I used one bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. It cured me and I have not been troubled since." J. H. Williams.

An Old Madstone.

[Mayville Bulletin.]

Mr. R. E. Leo and brother, of Reoterville, have a madstone that has been in their family over 300 years, coming down from generation to generation. It was originally owned by one of their ancestors, Dr. Parker, of England. Mr. Leo says it has been lately discovered that it is also a cure for poisoning. The stone was brought over from England long years ago, and has been used very effectively in many cases of mad dog bites.

Suicide Prevented.

The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered will interest many. A run-down system, or despondency invariably precedes suicide, and something has been found that will prevent that condition which makes suicide likely. LETTERS FROM WOMEN.

Miss Anna Prescott's Letter.

Miss Anna Prescott, in a letter from 216 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I was completely used up last fall, my appetite had failed and I felt weak and tired all the time. My doctor advised me to try Peruna and the relief I experienced after taking one bottle was truly wonderful."

"I continued its use for five weeks, and am glad to say that my complete restoration to health was a happy surprise to myself as well as to my friends."—Anna Prescott.

Peruna as a True Friend to Women.

Miss Florence Allan, a beautiful Chicago girl, writes the following from 75 Walton Place:

"As a tonic for a worn out system, Peruna stands at the head in my estimation. Its effects are truly wonderful in rejuvenating the entire system. I keep it on hand all the time, and never have that 'tired feeling,' as a few does always makes me feel like a different woman."—Florence Allan.

Peruna will be found to effect an immediate and lasting cure in all cases of systemic catarrh. It acts quickly and beneficially on the diseased mucous membranes, and with healthy mucus membranes the catarrh can no longer exist.

Peruna Makes You Feel Like a New Person.

Miss Marie Costa, a popular young woman of Appleton, Wis., and President of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, writes:

"When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week."

"I have now used it for three seasons, and find it very valuable and efficacious."—Miss Marie Costa.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

SAUL TRIES TO KILL DAVID.

It was soon evident that David's valorous deed was not a sporadic incident. It was the natural fruit of a valorous life, and there was more fruit of the same kind to follow. In the quiet phrase of the narrative, he behaved himself wisely. He was so prudent that he alarmed even the courtiers who would naturally have been jealous of his advancement. They might have disdained the intrusion of a shepherd boy in court. They would have done so if the slightest pretext or opportunity had been given. Success had evidently not made David conceited—the special badge of military men.

But the murderous envy of Saul is the link upon which the character of David stands out like a fair cameo in clear, cut and lovely outline. The provoking cause of Saul's jealousy in this instance, seemed to be the popular aversion in which, in Oriental style for such occasions, the women took conspicuous part. The rule of their exclusion made this exceptional appearance the more effective. They chanted some favorite old folk-song, and added as a refrain, "Saul has slain his thousands and David his myriads." The refrain was so constantly repeated that it became the sustaining expression of the whole affair. In it the mood of praise was distinctly given to the Bethlehemite stripling. Comparisons on such an occasion are especially odious. It is quaintly said that lavish commendations of those whom we admire in such a world as this, often prove a real injury. So the daughters and matrons of Israel did David an unconscious, but veritable disservice. The self-centered king could not brook the supposed indignity.

Saul harbored a mean passion. It confused his moral sense. He became a vilest slave. He had heard Samuel's intimation that a neighbor better than himself should take his crown. He was on the watch for that rival, and recognized him in David. He saw in this incident the unfolding of a divine purpose to supplant him, and determined rashly and impudently to nip that purpose in the bud.

Saul tried one expedient after another to secure his crown and wicked end. Twice with his own hand, in murderous rage, he hurled his javelin at his young armor-bearer, aiming to pluck him to the wall. But David in both instances availed himself of that dexterity he had learned in meeting other wild beasts. Next, Saul required dangerous exploits at David's hands, anticipating that in some of them he would be slain, but David seemed invulnerable, covered with the impenetrable shield of Providence. The new position which the king gave him with such sinister motives put him in touch with the popular heroism. It was the Oriental court could never be. So that Saul soon found he had only given new opportunities to his rival.

Saul next sought to achieve in the boudoir what he had failed to accomplish afield. He would fain use his own daughter as a bait to catch David with. Paternal feeling was so expelled by another passion that he regarded her feelings no more than the fisherman does the angle worm. Before he was through with it, he had sacrificed the happiness of two daughters; reviled his own wife, and sought the life of a son as well as a son-in-law.

With every failing expedient his jealousy deepened. He would fain have thrust his hands within the sacred precincts of the school of the prophets and taken the refuge, thence. While life lasted the stubborn purpose to thwart the Divine will in the elevation of David to the throne changed
